Meteorologist's View

Gusty around any showers in the morning and then windy again later in the day as a front begins to approach from the west.

Forecast for Tuesday 28 Jun 2022

Weather: A wet night with increasing cloud from the west. Very strong winds will push frontal rain east during the morning and it will be heavy at times. Rain will turn showery before clearing east during the evening with some clear spells developing later.

Maximum wind: Southerly 30-35mph with gusts 40-45mph, gusts increasing 55mph for a time in the morning.

Chance of cloud-free hill tops above 700m: 50%, low cloud in association with rain band will clear in the afternoon.

Low cloud and visibility: Broken cloud layers above 500m will cover the hills in the morning as rain spreads across the area. General visibility will be good at the start of the day but will fall moderate or poor in heavy rain at times especially in the south.

Temperature: Valleys: Plus 11 rising to 16 Celsius.
At 700m: Plus 6 rising to 10 Celsius.
Freezing level: Above all summits.
